ARDEN HOUSE DENTAL MEET NEW DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH GUIDELINES

Arden House DENTAL invest in new state of the art sterilisation system

Arden House DENTAL has always been a quality practice well known for being up to date and investing in the latest technology for the benefit of their patients.

Recent Guidelines issued by the Department of Health, stipulate that the dental profession must meet an essential standard of cross infection and decontamination procedures.

In a true Arden House DENTAL approach, they have decided that rather than settle for this standard, they would invest in the very latest in sterilisation systems and have now finished the necessary extension and installed a fabulous new facility.

The standard is considered Best Practice within the profession and the Team are delighted to be able to demonstrate the commitment to the quality of care patients have come to expect at the Practice.

Ian Hazlem, founder of the Practice said "It has been hard work getting everything in place, but it is very important to us that we provide the best service possible for our patients. This new system will ensure that all work carried out at the Practice will be entirely traceable in the future."

He continued: "Our purpose built sterilisation room has been designed to meet all the features of best practice in decontamination using state of the art equipment. We are very proud of our Practice and the investment will ensure we continue to offer quality dentistry in a very clean and safe environment."
